

Do you leave voicemail on others' phones? Are there particular people you feel comfortable sending voicemail?: Only for my mom. If they don't answer I just send a text explaining why I called.

After calling an unanswered phone, what determines whether you leave a voicemail?: Friends/family I don't usually leave a message because I know they'll call/text me back. If I don't know them well I leave a voice mail.

When compared to other forms of communication (letters, text, email, etc), does voicemail strike you as antiquated? Why/why not?: .

Do you have any particular association with receiving voicemail?: .

Are there ever circumstances where you would prefer voicemail?: When I'm waiting for news that I might need to consider before reacting/responding (like news from the dr or a job offer or something). I'd prefer voice-mail in these situations because text would make it hard to fully explain, and email makes it hard for the person to convey emotion with the news.

Have you ever received a meaningful voicemail? And if so, what made it meaningful?: I have a few saved on my phone from family members that just randomly wanted to let me know they're thinking of me. Most of them have included inside jokes. It means more listening to their voices than to go through old texts.